

Charlotte, NC

True.com filters philanderers

01:34 PM EDT on Thursday, July 22, 2004

By The Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. -- How can you tell if that special someone is really single?

The online dating service True.com is offering a way to make sure your suitor isn't married.

True founder Herb Vest says they search public records to determine whether their members are actually single.

Subscribers to the dating service are also screened for criminal records.

Vest says they want to provide a wholesome environment for courtship.

But there are other options for those looking for a little action on the side -- even if it's just on the computer screen.

Both Yahoo and Microsoft's MSN network have online chat groups for cads who are "married and flirting.