

The Internet Dating Coach eZine

June, 2005

Let's Review: True.com

by Melanie Dodson, The Internet Dating Coach

In my expert opinion, True.com is one of the better online dating sites out there. Why do I say that? It's for a combination of reasons. First, it's where I finally met my match (more on that in the next issue). In addition to this seemingly bias rationale, I find True.com to have an appealing set of features which sets it apart from the average site.

Those features include a free Compatibility Test which provides you with an amazingly accurate profile of yourself. It's endorsed by Psychology Today, and the test identifies 99 distinct factors found in successful relationships. Based on these factors, as well as your preferences such as age range, height range and religion, you are matched to those with whom you are compatible. Details are provided with respect to each match, indicating your Total Compatibility Index as well as a description of how well you match up on 25 traits such as Integrity, Sexual Prowess and Readiness to Commit.

In addition, True.com provides Criminal Background Screenings on members before they are allowed to communicate. They also screen members against public records to check marital status, and married members are not allowed to communicate.

On June 27, 2005, True.com announced a new tool available on its site: Soul Mates Forever: Secrets to Building a Lasting Relationship. This tool helps individuals and couples "assess and address a series of crucial relationship issues, ranging from personality, lifestyle preferences and sex life, to money management and conflict resolution."

All these features are in addition to other features typical of dating sites, such as free profile posting, winks, chat, email masking, searches and so on. As a site with "the works", I recommend that internet daters check it out.

Melanie Dodson has been successfully coaching Internet daters, full-time, for two years. Visit her online at www.TheInternetDatingCoach.com or contact her at Melanie@TheInternetDatingCoach.com.